

RACISM: A SICK MENTALITY

The first thing that strikes my mind after glancing at this title is regretfully 'the human race'. After a plethora of uncertain historical cases based on this subject, it seems quite impossible to deal with people in support of human distinctiveness. White people who are unwilling to support others appear heedless of the entire situation which is indeed incurable.

Being dark skinned is NEITHER a disease nor a con. The ones who are unacquainted till date should not: act like a fish out of water, jump to conclusions despite being ill informed and make their fellow mates feel worthless because of petty issues, they aren't even a part of.

Instead, they should spare a minute to introspect and act like a literate by browsing all the injustice happening in the neighborhood. If they cannot change the ending of a single one, shouldn't try to inculcate silence. As acting untroubled would make them a part of the privileged race turning the situation even more worse. Unable to refer to the situational examples is not the sign of standing against justice, rather it is the proof of not letting anyone get dishonored.

As no single colour can define or personify the concept of beauty, in the same way a person's area of origin, their caste and other specifications cannot decide their rights. So, educate yourself and become the reason for the end to this violence, it is NOW or NEVER, stand up for the right and BREAK THE SILENCE.
